June 8, 2018 - PUTRAJAYA: a laborious system for determining the quality of schools, which has been the scourge of teachers, has been suspended with 22,115,050 Monthly visits to MY Popular in No more Linus program in schools next year: D-G Published on: Saturday, December 01, 2018 Text Size: Kota Kinabalu: The Ministry of Education will no longer conduct literacy and numeral screening (Linus) programs in schools from next year, said its CEO Datuk Dr. Aminin (photo). Instead, he said, schools will identify their own ways of addressing learning difficulties faced by their students. The ministry will always support any Linus activity, but the program package by the ministry will be stopped, he said after presenting his executive conversation to Sabah's Education Department staff, here, Friday.The Linus program was first introduced in 2009 under the National Key Education Outcomes Area (NKRA) to address the problem of lack of 3M skill skills more systematically among primary school pupils. At this year's Ujian Penilaian Sekolah Rendah (UPSR) results, Amin said more students were getting on all subjects, proving that the ministry was on the right track with a focus on minimal skill and fun learning. WHEN we emphasized minimal skill, fun learning and meaningful learning, we found that the number of Straight As increased and many problems were solved, although before that many people were worried about it, Amin said. It shows that if we emphasize real education in schools and make it interesting and meaningful, it will ultimately solve many of our problems that we face. So it's a good sign we're on the right track. Amin noted that in general for the state the number of direct E students (those who did not reach the minimum standards of master's degree) also decreased, which is a good ADVERTISEMENT This means that we have been successful in our strategy to reduce these direct E's. E's. as we approach, we will find that some items need more attention. For example, mathematics and English are two subjects that we regret need more attention. We also need to take a closer look at the areas here as we find there are certain areas that need our attention as we see the mastery of some items there are still minimal. I have therefore asked the directors and district education officers to pay attention to topics that have not reached the minimum level, as well as (pay more) attention to these areas that need attention. - Neil Chan
